FATHER LIAM SAYS: Some years ago, placards would be seen on televised football matches just bearing three numbers: 3:16. This was to remind us of the message in John's Gospel: 'God so loved the world that he gave his only Son'. I saw a comment on that – 'God cared enough to send the best'. Our faith indeed tells us that as far as God is concerned, nothing but the very best is good enough for us. Before and after Easter every year the Church mostly chooses readings from St. John's Gospel at our Sunday Masses.

John opens his gospel by reminding us that Jesus is the eternal word of God, who became man and lived among us so that we might have eternal life. Before he is taken from them, he promises his disciples: 'Peace I leave you, my peace I give you'. (14:27) When he is raised from the dead he says to the disciples: 'Peace be with you'.

The message of peace embraces the whole story of Jesus. We naturally hunger for peace in our hearts, in our families and peace between nations. We all agree about the beauty and value of peace but throughout history there is a sad lack of agreement about how peace comes. John wrote his gospel for people who were all too familiar with turbulence. They would have especially treasured accounts of how the disciples felt endangered by the waters of the Sea of Galilee. There is the account of a few friends of Jesus crossing that huge lake: 'It was already dark and Jesus had not yet re-joined them. A strong wind was blowing and the sea was getting up. When they had rowed four or five kilometres, they saw Jesus walking on the sea and coming near the boat. They were afraid but he said to them: 'Do not be afraid. It's me. Don't be afraid. They were glad to take him into the boat and it reached the shore at the place they were making for.' (6:17-21). He is telling them -for they are in the dark – that he indeed is Jesus, the one with whom they had been travelling around Galilee. But he may have been telling them far more than that. He may have been telling them 'It's me' but the Greek that John wrote in could also be translated as 'I am' – a translation that takes us back to Moses meeting God at the burning bush and God revealing himself as 'I am' or 'I am who am'. John likes to alert us to the fuller meaning of who Jesus is and what he says and does. Jesus was not just their everyday friend but the awesome God of all humanity.

Jesus and his disciples were familiar with the yearly miracle of the fresh green life of the vineyards. In the wintertime the vines were cut back and look miserable and almost dead. But then they put out fresh shoots and leaves and bear rich fruit. In John's gospel we hear Jesus speaking about our relationship with him as being like the branches growing out of a vine. When we live with Jesus and in Jesus we will be like these fresh shoots on vines, like those branches, full of life. With him and in him, it is always springtime. Rather than give us the parables of Jesus as other gospels do, the gospel of John places before us images that Jesus uses that illustrate the closeness of his relationship with us. In so many ways, John's gospel has a style all his own. We don't usually hear John's Gospel in Ordinary time but every year at Eastertide he is the conveyer of the Good News. He puts before us at great length Jesus' portrayal of himself as our Good Shepherd. 'Jesus comes so that we may have life and have it to the full'. (10:10)

The Easter Season is a prolonged celebration of the gift of life which we receive at Baptism and share in fully in the life to come. As we approach the Feast of Pentecost John reminds us that Jesus promised that he would not leave his disciples orphans. He himself would be with us forever and he would also send the Holy Spirit to continue to lead us. Only in the Fourth Gospel is the Spirit referred to as 'The Advocate', 'The Paraclete', 'The Spirit of Truth'. Even though Jesus will no longer be seen by the world, the bond between Jesus and his disciples is secured by the Spirit. 'Paraclete' – a Greek word – means 'someone who is called alongside'. He accompanies us. He journeys with us. We are a 'synodal' Church and we depend on the power of the Holy Spirit to guide and strengthen us.
